NATO Counting On Gen. Ike's Services Until June

May Leave Army Before Convention

Washington (AP)—Supporters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower saw reason to speculate last night that the five-star general may return to the United States in June to clear the air on his views before the Republican national convention meets in July.

New hope among the general's boosters was based on a statement by Canadian Foreign Minister Lester B. Pearson that the North Atlantic Treaty organization (NATO) is counting on General Eisenhower's services until June.

This was the first official indication that Eisenhower might even now be preparing to step down as supreme commander of Allied forces in Europe and possibly doff his uniform before the GOP nominating convention in July.

Recalling efforts to picture Eisenhower as the "indispensable man" in helping Europe rearm—such a key figure that it would be a blow if he left his command post to run for the presidency—observers noted that in his speech yesterday the general reported "solid progress, a good beginning" has been made in building up the defenses of Western Europe.

Some interpreted this to indicate the general feels enough progress has been made so that he could safely return the task to his top NATO lieutenants such as Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther and Field Marshal Montgomery.

It was noted, however, that Eisenhower also declared NATO is still "little more than a skeleton" and "we are a long way yet from attaining our goal."

Elsewhere on the political front: Sen. Estes Kefauver widened his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination to a six-state campaign with the announcement that he will enter the Massachusetts primary on April 11.

A slate of delegates pledged to Eisenhower was entered in the Minnesota primary on March 18. Slates were also filed there for Sen. Hubert M. Humphrey (D-Minn.) and Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Humphrey is running as a "favorite son" candidate, but has said he has no presidential aspirations himself and wants Mr. Truman to run again.

General MacArthur is expected to withdraw his name from the Minnesota race, as has done in several other instances. That would leave Eisenhower pitted against Harold E. Stassen.

Sen. Robert Taft's supporters claimed a pledge of eight delegates for the Ohio senator in New York, where Eisenhower headquarters had previously been counting on a solid block of all New York's 96 delegates for the general.

But Taft's campaign managers found less to cheer about in the Southwest where Oklahoma's first two delegates named to the GOP national convention turned up pledged to Eisenhower.

Wagner Enters Senatorial Race

Harrisburg (AP)—The name of G. Harold Wagner was injected yesterday into the race for the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator.

Nomination petitions in behalf of the former State treasurer and auditor general were circulated throughout most of the State.

John Durbin, Harrisburg haberdasher and a former State official, said the Wagner boom is being led by Thomas A. Farrell, Washington, Wagner's attorney.

Wagner retired from active Democratic politics after leaving the auditor generalship in 1948. He took up his law practice in Wilkes-Barre.

U. N. Upholds Nationalist China's Charge Against Russia Of Treaty-Breaking

Paris, (AP)—The United Nations Assembly yesterday upheld, over Russian bloc opposition, a complaint by Nationalist China that Moscow failed to carry out its 1945 treaty of friendship with Chiang Kai-shek.

The vote for what the Nationalist Chinese called a moral judgment was 25 to 9, with 24 countries abstaining.

Those opposing the complaint were the five Soviet bloc members plus Burma, India, Indonesia and Israel.

The United States favored it. Britain and France abstained.

The vote was preceded by a strong denial by U. S. Delegate John Sherman Cooper that the Americans are planning aggression in southeast Asia or helping train Nationalist Chinese forces in Burma's mountains.

Later Russia failed in an open move to bring five iron curtain countries—Bulgaria, Albania, Hungary, Outer Mongolia and Romania—into the U. N.

The assembly voted 22 to 21 for a Russian resolution asking the Security Council to reconsider those applications as well as those of nine countries backed by the West—Finland, Italy, Portugal, Ireland, Jordan, Austria, Ceylon, Nepal and Libya.

But the proposal failed to obtain the required two-thirds majority.

Russia made it clear the five iron curtain countries must be admitted with the others in a one-package deal or no one would get in the U. N. at this time.

The assembly action overturned a Political committee decision favoring reconsideration of all at one time. That vote was 21 to 12, with 25 abstentions.

Most of the group believe a convention deadline is possible, or likely. And, in that event, two delegates said they thought the most likely compromise choice would be Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Significantly, these two delegates are high in the affairs of the party.

Right now, among those willing to express an opinion, three delegates lean to Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio. Two others are backing Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

$120,000 Gem Theft Solved With Arrests

New York (AP)—Detectives yesterday cracked the $120,000 Park Ave. jewel robbery of fashion designer Mollie Parnis, and said a boy's long memory was behind the stickup.

Three men, seized in rapid succession, admitted carrying out the elaborately-planned holdup, police said. Most of the jewelry—$100,000 worth—was recovered.

Police said the basis for the robbery was formed 11 years ago in the mind of a laundry delivery boy when he made a call at the apartment of Miss Parnis and her husband, Leon Livingston, and noticed the rich furnishings.

That boy, now 24-year-old Joseph Paladino, was named by police as the ringleader of the robbery. He and the two others, identified as Carmine Zoccolillo, 21, and Joseph Guidice, 22, all of Manhattan, were booked on charges of robbery and violation of the illegal weapons law.

Mrs. Taffinger Adds 'New Life' To March Against Polio By Monroe County Mothers

Like hundreds of other mothers in this area Thursday night, Mrs. Stephen Taffinger, 531 Queen St., Stroudsburg, set out with militant determination on a "march against polio."

The "march" ended up a bigger success than anyone had imagined, according to local officials. Last night the collection had edged upward to $1800 with several isolated territories left to be heard from over the weekend.

For Mrs. Taffinger, the "march" was a success in another way.

At 6:30—the appointed hour for the beginning of the march—Mrs. Taffinger left her home and began stopping at the lighted porches in the neighborhood.

When she had completed the collection of funds from her neighbors, Mrs. Taffinger turned the money over to her block chairman (and next-door neighbor) Mrs. Willis Rogalski, 531 Queen St., who, in turn, took the money downtown to the Stroudsburg Security Trust Co. headquarters.

Mrs. Taffinger went home, presumably to rest and get a good night's sleep. It was "about 9 p. m." at that time.

The Reds hedged yesterday on the question of behind-the-lines inspection during a Korean armistice and rejected flatly and Allied proposal to repatriate 600,000 civilians.

Staff officers of both sides completed an initial review of proposed truce ground rules and met again today at Panmunjom. They are studying the 54-paragraph Allied draft.

Erig Gen. William P. Nuckols, United Nations command spokesman, said the staff officers "have made considerable progress." He described as "minor" the differences existing on troop rotation, the number of ports of entry available to each side and the status of islands south of Pannai.

However, the major issue in the broad program of truce supervision—a ban on construction of military airfields—has not been discussed by the staff officers. It was shelved temporarily last week to permit the lower-level work on the other points.

The frozen front was so quiet yesterday that the U. S. Eighth Army reported an attack by only 13 Reds on the eastern front.

The Eighth's communiqué reported seven of the Communists were killed in the nuisance raid under the crags of Heartbreak ridge. Minor patrol contact was reported elsewhere along the front.

Snow and low clouds limited aerial action, but a flight of F-84 Thunderjets fought off eight faster MIG-15s and sent one of the Russian-built jets limping back to Manchuria with a number of hits.

Allied aerial losses since the war began now exceed 1,000. This includes 479 Air Force combat losses, 532 naval planes (including non-combat naval losses), and an unreported number of transports, small liaison and spotter planes and helicopters.

The figure compares with 850 Communist aircraft listed as destroyed or damaged, including 611 MIGs.

New York (AP)—Seatrains Lines, Inc., yesterday filed notice in the United States District court at Trenton, N. J., dismissing as a defendant the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroads in an anti-trust action.

The D. L. & W. railroad was named by Seatrain Lines in an anti-trust suit brought recently against 12 railroads and railroad associations.

Seatrains Lines President Graham M. Brush filed with the dismissal notice an affidavit absolving the D. L. & W. railroad.

Graham said in his affidavit that his company was satisfied that the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad "is not now actively participating in the combination and conspiracy alleged in the amended complaint to any greater extent than are numerous other railroads not named as defendants."

Dr. William Bennett was awaiting written notice from the hospital. He said "the next move is up to them."

Dr. Paul Lass could not be reached for comment.

Washington (AP)—Harold L. Ickes, 77, former secretary of the interior, was reported seriously ill and in a semi-coma last night at his farm at nearby Olney, Md.

Dr. Stephen Jones of Rockville, Md., one of Ickes' physicians, said "his condition took a turn for the worse Monday night, and it weakened him to the point where he can't fight any longer."

The physician said Ickes returned to his home Jan. 18 from a Washington hospital where he had been treated for "excruciating pain" from a former arthritic condition. He showed improvement for a time.

Ickes resigned as interior secretary in 1946.

Allies Lose 13 Planes In Week To Red Ground Fire

Seoul, Korea, Saturday, (AP)—Communist ground fire knocked down 13 Fifth Air Force warplanes during the week which ended yesterday.

The Air Force said one F-86 Sabre jet crashed because of mechanical failure.

During the same seven-day period Allied pilots shot down one Russian-made MIG-15 jet and damaged two others. There were no Allied losses in air battles.

The 14-plane loss was two below the record 16 destroyed by the Reds between Jan. 5-11. Seven of the lost planes were jets and seven were propeller driven.

The Communists knocked down 52 Allied planes during January for a record bag of U.N. aircraft. The allies, meantime, shot down only 31 Communist jets.

While the air war roared on around the clock, ground action was at a virtual halt.

Attorney To Investigate For McGrath

Washington (AP)—A six-foot three-inch lawyer from New York who calls himself "an Abraham Lincoln Republican" was appointed by the Truman administration yesterday to sweep corruption out of the Federal government.

The housecleaning boss is Newbold Morris, former president of the New York City Council, socialite, reformer—and now appointed a special assistant to the attorney general with extraordinary powers.

"This is probably the most important job I will ever have," Morris said as he was sworn in by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath.

The New York lawyer announced that McGrath and President Truman had given him "a completely free hand" in the cleanup campaign and that he will start work at 9 a. m. Monday.

The first Federal agency he will investigate, Morris said, will be the Justice department. This is the department McGrath himself heads.

Morris made it clear that his powers are that of an investigator and not a prosecutor.

He said he will make interim reports to the attorney general, citing cases which appear to warrant prosecution, and that there are 93 Federal grand juries to which evidence can be submitted.

Some advocates of government reform have suggested that a non-partisan team of prosecutors would be an effective means of getting at official wrongdoers, but the President has never committed himself to this course.

In announcing Morris' appointment, McGrath emphasized that the New Yorker "owes no allegiance whatsoever" to the attorney general or the Truman administration.

"I have asked him to undertake this task solely as a service to his country," McGrath said.

Morris' decision to start his investigation with the Justice department was especially significant in view of the fact that the House Judiciary committee voted earlier this week to conduct its own independent investigation of McGrath and his administration of the Justice department.

McGrath was the President's choice to organize the anti-corruption campaign after Mr. Truman abandoned earlier plans to create a non-partisan commission. The President said he had come to the conclusion that the job rightfully was one for the Justice department.

McGrath announced he would give the assistant to a man outside the government.

Sermon Topic Announced By Rev. Wunder

"Neutrality Impossible" will be the theme of Rev. W. F. Wunder's sermon at the 11 a. m. service Sunday in Grace Ev. Lutheran church, East Stroudsburg. The sermon will be based on Matthew 12:30, "He that is not with Me is against Me." These words of Christ have a vital bearing on the worlds desperate need for the Son of God and for strict adherence to His mandates in order that peace and good-will may be brought out of conflict and confusion.

The chancel choir will sing the traditional anthem, "Spirit of God" by Gillette, with Miss Charlotte Herman singing the soprano solo. Dr. and Mrs. Philip F. Ehrig will present the bulletins in honor of the Parish's 56th anniversary. The altar flowers will be placed by Mrs. Harold Repsher in loving memory of her sister, Mrs. Charlotte Sjoblom.

Mrs. Buffle Garris and Mrs. Ora Strunk will be in charge of the nursery conducted during the service. George Marsh, Donald Herman, Marlin Martz and James Litts will serve as ushers. Frank Schaller and Thomas I. Kintner will be acolytes and are candidates for the Pro Deo et Patria award.

No Deeds Presented For Filing As State's New Realty Tax Takes Effect

The office of Floyd Butz, recorder of deeds at the court house, was practically deserted yesterday, the date the new one per cent property tax went into effect. Not a single deed was presented for filing during the day.

This was in direct contrast to the rush at the recorder's office Wednesday when 22 were filed and Thursday when all records are believed to have been broken with the filing of 44 deeds. The let-down afforded the personnel of the office an opportunity to catch up on their work.

Recorder Butz declined to assume the responsibility of selling the new stamps for which $10 is charged on each $1,000 of a real estate transaction.

County Treasurer P. A. Rockefeller agreed to assume this responsibility and filed his bond with the Department of Revenue at Harrisburg. This must be approved by the Auditor General's department.

Up to the closing hour at the county treasurer's office yesterday afternoon, Mr. Rockefeller had not received any notification from Harrisburg he should take over the duties.

Until the change is approved at Harrisburg and notice has been received at the treasurer's office, no deeds can be accepted at the recorder's office for filing for property transfers.

However, it is the general impression at the recorder's office, there will be no great rush for the present at least due to the fact that so many people filed their deeds before the new tax went into effect.

There is one big question in connection with the new act: Who is to pay the tax, the buyer, or the seller? The act creating the new tax which is hoped to raise $20 million additional revenue for the State, is said to be vague on that subject and may not be determined until there is court action to clear up the situation. Up to that time, the opinion prevails that the parties to a real estate transaction will be compelled to decide who does the paying.

Political Privilege

One of the ingrained traits of the political outfit now swinging and swaying in Washington is its unabashed dislike for applying to itself the rules which govern more ordinary citizens.

The Boston branch, headed by John W. McCormack, the Democratic leader in the House of Representatives, lately has offered some scented examples of this trait.

Denis W. Delaney, the Boston internal revenue collector, has been convicted of bribe-taking.

Fourteen high-ranking employees of Delaney's office for four years have been accused of violating the Hatch Act, which prohibits political activity by federal payrollers. But the Civil Service Commission hasn't got around to deciding the cases.

Mr. McCormack, meanwhile, put through an amendment watering down the Hatch Act—taking out the part which made it mandatory that any violator be fired. And he says the Civil Service Commission was waiting for this softer before acting on the cases. (The softer has been on the books 17 months.)

It also is worth noting that the defense lawyer for 13 of 14 accused employees is a pal of Mr. McCormack and an assistant attorney general.

So here are the law, Civil Service and a high-ranking employee of the Justice Department being used to protect the politically privileged.

Self-Incrimination

Lawrence K. Rosinger has refused to tell a Senate committee whether he has ever been a Communist. He said he might incriminate himself.

In 1949 Mr. Rosinger was one of 25 Americans invited by Secretary of State Dean Acheson to consult with the State Department on America's China policy.

In 1950 the Institute of Pacific Relations obtained a grant of $7000 from the Rockefeller Foundation to enable Mr. Rosinger to supervise the preparation of a book, "State of Asia," published last year under IPR auspices.

We wonder what tests are applied by the State Department, the Rockefeller Foundation and the Institute of Pacific Relations when they are seeking expert advice or services.

Reds on Relief

After eight months, the State finally has succeeded in its effort to pry Antoninette Nuss loose from the relief rolls. Judge Henry X. O'Brien found her ineligible for public assistance because she participated in a movement (the Communist Party) to overthrow the U. S. Government.

Not many people will argue over the advisability of striking off the relief rolls those who would plot against the American way of life while living off its benefits.

But Judge O'Brien must have felt as though he had a Solomon's case to handle. Mrs. Nuss has two children who are entitled to public assistance, and she continues to receive payments in their behalf.

Makes you wonder how the Russians would have handled a case like this.

anti-foreign riots have taken place as early as June 12, 1882.

Nationalism was then, as now, a strong motivating force in all Eastern Mediterranean countries, ancient peoples resisting their control by the younger and, to them, less important, Western European countries. Today, internationalism is regarded by such peoples as a weapon of the Anglo-American powers to maintain the authority of the British Empire.

Woodrow Wilson revived the spirit of nationalism among the weak and backward nations, particularly in Asia, by the "Fourteen Points," supporting the concept of self-determination. In India, China and Egypt, colonialism became the most objectionable form of Western domination of Eastern peoples. Sun Yat-Sen turned his back on America and his eyes toward Soviet Russia on the issue of colonialism; Gandhi excited the imagination of the world on the same issue.

The basic problem in Egypt is the revision of the 1936 treaty with Great Britain. In July, 1951, the Egyptian Foreign Minister stated: "... Perhaps the British had now realized, however, that the most important point in any Anglo-Egyptian talks is that Egypt will not stand on their side at any time so long as they insist on occupying our territory and on separating the Sudan from Egypt." The 1936 Treaty would avail them nothing at a time of political or military pressure. Instead, it would be a cause of friction between Egypt and Britain at the moment of their grave and most pressing crisis.

The Egyptians demand that the Sudan must be under Egypt and greater Egyptian participation in the Suez Canal; the evacuation of British troops and the unification of the Nile Valley. On August 26, 1951, a mass meeting of the Socialist, Nationalist, and Socialist-Peasant parties passed resolutions demanding that the 1936 Anglo-Egyptian Treaty and the 1899 Sudan Condominium agreement be abrogated without delay. They called for a boycott of British troops, and that no food, material, or labor be allowed to reach British camps.

In October, the radical nationalist Moslem Brotherhood passed violent resolutions, perhaps the strongest of which were the first three:

(1) That a state of war with Britain should be declared and British forces in Egypt and the Sudan be considered aggressors; (2) That Anglo-Egyptian economic, commercial, and cultural relations should be severed; (3) That all Egyptian arms without license and that assaults on British should not be punishable.

Great Britain, the United States, France and Turkey, proposed the Allied Middle East Command, inviting Egypt to join them. Should Egypt accept the invitation, Great Britain would agree to the suspension of the 1936 treaty and to the withdrawal of such British forces not allocated to the proposed Middle East Command. The proposal is long, complicated, dealing with Egyptian, Sudanese and Suez problems. Egypt rejected this proposal on the ground that it could not be considered while British forces remained in Egypt.

The difficulty that the Egyptian government faced obviously was that they had so inflamed their own people against Great Britain that they could not stem the tide. This was most evident when Pakistan's offer of mediation was rejected.

The Egyptian Prime Minister, Nahas Pasha, offered the Egyptian Parliament four decrees unilaterally abrogating the Anglo-Egyptian treaty of 1936 and the 1899 Condominium agreement.

This naturally the British rejected and the rejection was supported by the United States. The British replied:

"The Anglo-Egyptian Treaty of friendship and alliance of 1936 contains no provision for unilateral denunciation at any time. If the principle were accepted that one party to such a treaty were entitled to denounce that treaty unilaterally, no reliance could be placed on any international agreement, and the whole basis and structure of international relations would cease to exist."

The year 1951 ended with no solution to any of the Egyptian problems, which now have reached a climax with the fall of the Egyptian Cabinet, the assertion of unusual authority by the King, and the burning of the historic Shepherd's Hotel, during rioting.

This is a struggle between nationalism and internationalism, a solution for which is not immediately available. Neither side can readily give in and the United Nations lacks the prestige to be of any value. Yet, a solution must be found if the Moslem world is not to turn entirely against the West.

Sunday School Lesson

Scripture—Luke 18:18-30; 19:1-10

By Newman Campbell

For the most part the men Jesus called to follow Him were poor, or, at least, like the fishermen, men who toiled hard for their living. Matthew, the publican, was well off, but he was dissatisfied with his manner of living, and gladly gave up his lucrative job to follow the Master.

In today's lesson two rich men came to Him, seeking redemption, and the manner in which each received the Master's message is the moral of the story.

There are men of our day (women too), who, because of their great wealth, or their wisdom or eminence in various fields, are much sought after for advice by those anxious to succeed. Jesus was such a man. His fame had spread throughout the land, and many came to Him seeking counsel or healing—physical or spiritual.

"And a certain ruler asked Him saying, Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?"

Jesus answered first, "Why callest thou Me good? none is good, save one, that is, God."

Then Jesus reminded the young man that he knew the commandments. Do not commit adultery. Do not kill. Do not steal. Do not bear false witness. Honor thy father and thy mother. "All these have I kept from my youth," said the ruler.

"Yet lackest thou one thing," said Jesus, "sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, follow Me."

"And when he heard this, he was very sorrowful; for he was very rich."

St. Mark tells us that Jesus loved this young man at sight, and when he went sorrowfully away because he could not part with his wealth, the Master must have been grieved too. Looking after him the Lord said, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!"

And then He said, "For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."

There is and was no easy way to become a disciple of the Master. Those who had left all to follow Him, did not find the way easy, but they did not repent of their decision, for, as Jesus told His apostles, "Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting."

One can but wonder what happened to this rich young ruler; did he find happiness in the way he chose to go, or did he consciously miss the thing he really wanted most—and what he had come to Jesus to find? We cannot know.

In Chapter 19 Luke tells us of another rich man who had not approached the Master, but who evidently was curious to see what He looked like. "And Jesus entered and passed through Jericho. And behold, there was a man named Zacchaeus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich."

He was a small man, and being eager to see Him of whom he had heard so much, he climbed up into a tree so he could get a good look.

When Jesus came under the tree He looked up and called, "Zacchaeus, make haste, and come down, for today I must abide at thy house."

Did Zacchaeus hesitate? Not for a moment. "And he made haste, and came down, and received Him joyfully."

Of course, many murmured against Jesus, saying, "He was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner," for Zacchaeus was a much detested tax gatherer for Rome. Such criticisms, never seem to have disturbed the Master when He was intent on saving a soul.

Standing before the Lord, this second rich man answered Him, "Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold."

To Zacchaeus money was not the most important thing in the world; a clear conscience was worth more than gold. Jesus must have recognized that in the small body of this man was a large soul waiting the Master's touch to be healed.

"And Jesus said unto him, This day salvation is come to this house, forasmuch as he also is a son of Abraham."

"For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

Quoting from the writings of Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, our commentator relates that there was an interval between the end of verse seven and the beginning of verse eight. We have no means of knowing how long it lasted, but Dr. Morgan was convinced that Jesus and Zacchaeus had an interview during that interval while the others waited. After that it was that Zacchaeus made his statement which caused the Lord to rejoice over his penitence of past sins and his promise to do right in the future.

Memory Verse—"Enter ye in by the narrow gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many are they that enter in thereby. For narrow is the gate, and straitened the way, that leadeth unto life, and few are they that find it."—Matthew 7:13, 14.

My New York

—By Mel Heimer

New York—It looked like the old home week in the living room of the big Park Avenue apartment. The people sitting around were Ray Ventura, France's well known orchestra leader turned movie producer; Audrey Hepburn, the graceful young overnight star of the Broadway play Gigi; Lester Fuller, a film director-writer, and Michelle Farmer, an actress turned housewife. It was only last summer that all of these genial souls were knocking themselves out on the Riviera making a movie called Monte Carlo Baby, and now they were holding an informal reunion and talking, mostly, about Donna Reed.

Miss Reed is a Hollywood film performer, and a pretty little one, who originally was supposed to make Monte Carlo Baby, but who discovered she had too many contractual commitments and was forced to back out—thus opening the gates to gold and glory for Miss Hepburn.

Miss Hepburn is this year's darling of the legitimate theater, and she has just been signed by a Hollywood studio—Willis Wyler is thinking of her for his next film, Roman Holiday—and all of this has happened since Miss Reed backed out of Ventura's movie. It makes a spectacular success story and it matters little here that I alone of all New Yorkers am not completely sold on her talents.

"When we do not get Miss Reed," the suave and portly Ventura reminisced, "we are in pretty desperate straits, because just a certain kind of piquant girl is needed for the part."

"So we go over to London and go through dozens of photos of possible English actresses—many of them big stars—at a talent agency and do not see what we want. Then we see Miss Hepburn's picture and Lester here says 'We want to see this one!'"

The talent agency people were none too enthusiastic about "this one," since Miss Hepburn was just a ballet dancer with a few bit performances in the movies. Just a nothing.

However, Ventura and Fuller insisted, and after they had seen and talked with Audrey—who had topped wearily out of bed and dragged herself morosely off to the audition after a hard night's work at the ballet—they signed her. And the snowball had begun.

Colette, the famous French author of Gigi, was at Monte Carlo when we were shooting the film," Ventura said, "and when she met Audrey, she thought she was just right for her play, which Henry Miller was to produce in New York."

"They signed her for that, Hollywood signed her in November—and now she's right on top of the entertainment world... and all because of Donna Reed. Well, not all because, but partly because, anyway."

Miss Farmer, a real doll who met and married Bob Amon, Ventura's assistant, when she went to Monte Carlo last May, is known to headline-hunters as Gloria Swanson's daughter. She seems the complete opposite of the swishy, toothy, power-personality Miss Swanson, being pretty, rather serious and almost malely direct. When she fell for her reminiscing about the Riviera, she told how pleasantly surprising it was to work for Ventura.

"You know," she said, "with a lot of foreign film companies, actresses go abroad with much misgiving—they don't know if they'll get paid regularly, what conditions will be like and whether the whole thing is a shoe-string operation."

"However, Ray's production was top-drawer all the way that I ought to take my pen in hand and dispel some of it in the hearts of people.

I thank him for the compliment. If I had the power to dispel fear and to restore courage I think I should want to join the ranks of the apostles.

My correspondent in Fairhope—who, by the way, is 74 years old—tells me that he knew a man in Memphis who had business on the sixteenth floor of an office building.

He would walk up the entire sixteen floors because he had once seen an elevator fall and kill three persons.

Then my friend goes on to remark that 95% of all people die in bed. But nobody seems to be afraid to go to bed, just because so many die in their beds.

I can't figure out whether this is sound reasoning or not. At any rate it is a fairly good illustration of FEAR.

What is this FEAR business? Why are we so afraid of things nowadays—of things and events?

The late President Roosevelt told us that the one thing we have to fear is fear itself.

How right he was!

You and I have so often feared calamities that never happened. I remember years ago when I was usually broke at the end of every week, my blood pressure used to go up to 300 or 400 when the paymaster was late with his checks.

I used to think that perhaps some creditor had attached my salary; that my company had gone broke and I would have to go without pay. I could see my landlord throwing me out into the street and keeping all my clothes for security.

Then the paymaster came—he had dawdled on the way with a blonde stenographer—and everything was hunky dory.

through and it was delightful. And never having been on the Riviera before, I was entranced all the time I was there."

I could name a hundred bugs—bugs I used to and still have.

Like most men, I am deadly afraid of sickness. Every time there is the least little thing the matter with me I rush to the bathroom, get the thermometer and take my temperature.

While it is in my mouth I picture pneumonia, cancer, diabetes, heart failure.

Then I take it out and look, 98.6—and suddenly I feel all right again.

It is the same with our national and international fears.

To listen to a lot of talkers—and the higher they are the more afraid they seem to be—you'd think we were already in a world war and that we had already lost our lives, or at least our shirts.

Although, the way we are going now, we'll probably lose our shirts anyway.

Sometimes I think that something much more insidious than anything the preachers of Communism can do to us, is the work of the preachers of fear.

And I also think that much more weakening than the Communists are our Fearmongers in high places!

While gathering recipes for her Cooking for Company best seller, Ruth Mills Teague encountered one housewife who kept next to her baking oven two cups exactly alike except for size. One was almost twice as big as the other. Mrs. Teague asked, "Don't you ever get confused and use the wrong cup by mistake?"

"I should say not," laughed the housewife. "That big cup is my borrowing cup. The little one is the returning cup."

Sign plastered on a shoe store window in darkest Brooklyn: "This is the shop that always remembers that dogs are a man's best friends."

Hollywood—Joyce MacKenzie brought back the darndest souvenir from her recent Caribbean tour (with other movie personalities) to entertain troops. It's a sort of crude xylophone made out of an old drum. Plays beautiful music, the lovely strident insist. She bought it for $5 from a thatched-hut dweller in Trinidad.

Alan Ladd tells how sick he was recently from flu: "I thought the Lord and I were going to be talking to each other." Alan showed up on the "Botany Bay" set wearing the latest family pet in his overcoat pocket. It's a 7-week-old dachshund, Fritz, to replace an older one killed by a car.

The story about the studio gatekeeper who didn't recognize the star is an ancient perennial. Yet Writer Frank Scully testifies it happened the other day at Paramount. Tony Curtis wanted in to surprise his pal, Jerry Lewis, by playing an extra's part (just in rehearsal) in "Jumping Jacks."

Curtis had to thumb a ride through the gate with Scully to get past the stern studio cop.

Seven O'clock

Curtain

The tradition that the American theater is for the "fifth martini plate" feedback, who-cares-what-time-it-is set, and that any hour before 9 p. m. is matinee time, is at last being given a slight blitz. Today we turn a cartwheel, fire a forty-gun salute and touch off a few giant crackers for Messrs. Rodgers and Hammerstein who have answered "Yes" to the question, "Is there a place in the theater for people who like to go to a play cold sober, who sometimes have to make a bus or train and who must get back to work the next morning on time?"

The boys inaugurated a 7 o'clock curtain for one of their shows, and the S.R.O. sign was up, indicating there definitely are people who don't think they lose face by going to a play without a late dinner, a supreme contempt for others, and a fine pastime for tramping on the legs of less casual playgoers.

The 7 o'clock curtain is carrying it a little too far. It has no chance of wide adoption. But if it leads to an 8 o'clock rise, Rodgers and Hammerstein will still rate the Elmer Twitcheil Trophy for Defense of People Who Don't Give a Damn, the Luther Quiggle Badge of Merit for assistance to Genuine Drama Lovers, and the Prentice Potts Prize for Distinguished Interest in Cash Customers Who Like to Sleep Home Instead of During the Show.

If they get anywhere, Rodgers and Hammerstein may rank close to Lincoln in the freeing of slaves. Slaves to an old Broadway custom which rates the early theatergoers the way Simon Legree rated Uncle Tom. Broadway has long kowtowed to a public educated to show up in the middle of the night for the first act. It has encouraged the idea that authors write exclusively for Alcoholics Not So Anonymous, the People Who Never Touch the Desert Before 8:30 and Upper-Setters Who Have to Buy the Book to Find Out What Happened in the First Half of the Show. The 8:30 curtain is a rarity. The curtain seldom rises before quarter to nine. And at 9:10 the latecomers are still using other people's feet, knees and laps to stage a replica of the Omaha Beach Landing.

There is no excuse for the 8:30 curtain and never has been, unless the management figured on a double header. The 9:45 curtain is an irritant used largely to keep people at home. It is video's greatest benefactor. Those video shows must be terrific, but you don't have to wait around all night for the current to come on, you can have fun while you're still young and there are no cries of "So sorry!" every few minutes from people who have mistaken your legs for a ship's ladder.

Best wishes, Rodgers and Hammerstein, pioneers and friends of amusement seekers always! But other producers won't go for your idea. It makes too much sense.

New York City now proposes to put a 10 per cent tax on hotel rooms occupied by transients.

This is a queer way to reflect a warm feeling for guests. Is there a "Wanna Bet?" on the welcome mat? Is Grover Whalen's gardenia a fake? Charles MacAdam, a horse named after a well-known syndicate man won at Hialeah for $380.

Shudda Haddim missed again. He was told to look over the field in the paddock as there was a good thing in it, but says, "I looked around for the tip but couldn't tell him from MacAdam."

No phase of automobile operation screams for more attention than that of the motor trucks and trailers. Four kids were killed in Connecticut a few nights ago in another case where a truck took a turn and jack-knifed the trailer across the highway in the path of a passenger car. It happens somewhere every day and night. Russell A. Fish.

ARE YOU WALKING ON AN ASBESTOS FLOOR?

Asbestos mines produce fibers that give the tile durability.

After trip through mill, cut-out design and tile are molded.

ALTHOUGH Americans walk more than 500 billion miles each year, they usually take little notice of the floors in their homes and shops and are unaware of scientific research which goes into perfecting them. Frequently persons walk on asbestos, a fire-resistant and insulating material which is the chief ingredient of the asphalt tile floors in many homes. Scientists take the rough product from far-off asbestos mines, mix it carefully with resins, pigments and other minerals and transform it by an intricate heating, rolling and cutting process into decorative tile squares tough enough to withstand long, hard use and millions of footsteps. A firm like Kentile, Inc., for example, first takes asbestos fibers from the mine and mixes them with mineral fillers and plasticizers. The ingredients are heated and carried on a conveyor belt to a series of sheeting mills where workmen make a marble-like veining. The heavy sheet then goes onto another conveyor belt which takes it to the calendar rolls for thinning out. After waxing and cooling, the asphalt tile sheet is cut into squares. Skilled workers form designs of many cut-out parts which fit together and are set in the base tile. The design and base are then molded together. Intense heat from a lamp keeps the tile pliable and gives the design the appearance of having grown in the tile. Workmen put on the finishing touches by aligning the pattern with the main body of the tile, giving the whole a "made-together" look. The tiles receive a final visual inspection as they come off the conveyor belts. Then they are packed and ready for shipping to their final destinations. The variety of shapes and sizes of patterns makes tile a colorful part of American homes.

Asphalt tiles are installed in variety of colors and design.

Self-Employed Pay Two Taxes At Same Time

By Alexander R. George

Washington (AP) — The self-employed make their first payment of social security tax on or before March 15, 1952.

Every self-employed person who is under social security must file a return on his self-employment income for 1951 if his net earnings from self-employment amounted to $400 or more. This self-employment income return is made on income tax Form 1040, and the social security tax is paid along with income tax.

Some self-employed mistakenly believe they have a choice about being under social security. If you are covered by the law, the payment of social security tax is compulsory.

Generally, if you are the sole proprietor of a business or if you give service as an independent contractor or as a member of a partnership or similar organization, you will have self-employment income.

However, the law says that certain kinds of self-employment is not covered by social security.

Those not under social security are:

Public officials, doctors, clergymen, lawyers, dentists, Christian science practitioners, architects, professional engineers, railroad employees, funeral directors, osteopaths, chiropractors, optometrists and registered, licensed and full-time practicing public accountants.

The social security tax (old age and survivors insurance) for the self-employed is 2 1/2 per cent of net earnings from self-employment. The maximum amount of earnings which can be taxed is $3,600 a year, or a top tax of $91 a year.

Some self-employed persons also worked in 1951 for wages which were subject to withholding of social security tax. For them the tax payment works this way:

Suppose your earnings from a company which withheld social security tax from your wages amounted to $2,000 and your net earnings from self-employment totaled $3,000.

Your employer already has deducted the social security tax on $2,000. Since the most that can be taxed in one year is $3,600, you pay 2 1/2 per cent tax on $1,600 of your $3,000 self-employment earnings.

If the wages you received from an employer were $3,600 and your self-employment income was $3,600 or any other amount, you do not pay any social security tax on your self-employment earnings.

That's because your employer already had withheld that tax on $3,600—the maximum which can be taxed.

Of course, the self-employed pay income tax on their earnings the same as other taxpayers do. And they get the same exemptions and allowable deductions to help reduce the amount of their income tax.

If your income is derived entirely from salary or wages or from dividends and interest on investments, capital gains or annuities you have no self-employment income. And you pay no self-employment tax.

Furthermore, not all income obtained in self-employment is included in determining your net earnings from self-employment.

You should leave out (1) rentals from real property unless you are a real estate dealer, (2) income derived from the business of farming, (3) interest received from securities or dividends on stock unless you are a dealer in securities.

The self-employed person under social security should have a social security number. Putting your social security number at the top of Page 1 of your income tax return is important.

It furnishes identification. It also may prevent tax liens of another person with the same name being attached to your real or personal property.

If you have sold any property, real or personal, ask the collector of revenue for a form called Schedule D. And if you itemize your non-business income tax deductions, save your receipts and

Pfc. Moyer Stationed In Germany

Pfc. Roy A. Moyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Moyer of Long Pond, is now stationed at Breenhaven, Germany as a motor pool mechanic.

Pfc. Moyer entered service Feb. 21, 1951 and was stationed at Fort Dix until his departure for overseas duty. He landed in Germany Oct. 5, 1951.

Moyer's written accounts in letters home to his parents have indicated he finds the German people friendly and the countryside beautiful. The Germans have begun the slow, tedious task of rebuilding out of the ruins which were left following the war, he says.

Moyer receives letters from this country in "about seven to 10 days". He would greatly enjoy hearing from his friends in this area.

His address is: Pfc. Roy A. Moyer, US 52-103-806; HQ 519th F.A. Bn., APO 46, c/o Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

they'll save you from added taxes for "unsubstantiated" deductions.

The computation of your self-employment tax is made on separate Schedule C. With attached Schedule C-A, this should be filed with your income tax return on Form 1040.

If you file an estimate of income tax for 1952, you do not include any estimate of self-employment tax.

Police Arrest Truck Driver After Crash

Mellhaney — Two trucks were in collision on Route 115, 100 yards west of the intersection with Route 209, this place, at 7:30 yesterday morning. Damage was slight, but the driver of one of the vehicles was cited for violation of the motor code, Brodheads State police said.

Jerry O. Duffy, 23, of Philadelphia, was driving a 1951 truck owned by the McCormick Truck Co., of Ashland, east on the highway. His machine sideswiped the truck owned by G. E. Bush and Son, of East Stroudsburg, driven by Jack A. Derr, 25, of 901 N. Ninth St., Stroudsburg.

Police said that Duffy, who informed them his vision was interfered with by the bright morning sun, was well over the center of the highway when it hit the Bush machine. Derr, police said, had pulled over to the shoulder of the highway to avoid a crash, but was halted by a service pole.

The left front sides of both trucks were damaged to the extent of $100 each, according to the police and were both able to leave the scene of the accident on their own power.

Duffy was taken before Justice of the Peace Edgar Hamm, Brodheads State, where he was charged with violation of section 1004 of the motor code, for failure to remain on the right side of the highway.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Three Escape Serious Hurts In Accident

A light 1950 sedan was badly wrecked, one of the three occupants was injured, not seriously, and later prosecuted for reckless driving when the car crashed into a service pole late Thursday night near the Penn Dell dairy, 665 N. Courtland St., East Stroudsburg.

Edward M. Harloe, officer of the East Stroudsburg police force, who investigated the accident, said the car was operated by Donald E. Coombe, 20, of Park Crest, Barnesville, Schuylkill county, a student at East Stroudsburg State Teachers College.

Coombe suffered lacerations behind the left ear and bruises of the face and body, Officer Harloe said. He was treated at Monroe County General Hospital, East Stroudsburg, where he had been taken by the officer and discharged yesterday afternoon.

Harloe reported that Gerald Murray and Clifton Liddecoat, students at the college, were riding with Coombe at the time of the crash, but escaped injury.

Coombe was driving his car east on N. Courtland St. at 11:30 p. m. Thursday when the machine skidded about 100 yards sideways on a curve near the Penn Dell dairy and hit a Bell Telephone Co. pole on the right side of the road. The entire left side and top of the machine were crushed, the damage being placed at between $600 and $700. It was towed away to a neighboring garage. The service pole was slightly damaged, Harloe said.

Officer Harloe stated the trio of young men left the scene of the accident after the crash and returned to the college, where he picked them up and took Coombe to the hospital for treatment.

Coombe was taken before Justice of the Peace Herbert G. Bonser yesterday afternoon where he pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving and was fined $25 and costs, which he paid and was discharged.

Friendly Chat With Captain, View Of Liner's Instruments Thrill Ocean-Going Couple

Editor's Note: Following is the second in a series of reports from Britain and Europe by Ruth Haller Ottaway, mother of James H. Ottaway, publisher of The Daily Record. The writer is an experienced journalist and traveler and her reports from abroad in recent years have received a favorable reception by Record readers.

S. S. Ile de France—Summons from Commandant Frank Garrigue, none other than the captain of the ship. Led by the chef de reception, we filed through halls, up narrow stairways, entered concealed elevators, finally mounted on high up more swirling tiny stairways and debouched into the captain's quarters.

Spacious, practical, no clutter, masculine, they are as they should be. A pleasant, clear-eyed, clean-cut man with an aura of the sea and dependability about him, there he stood greeting us warmly.

Mention books, cities, people—anything—the captain knew all about them, and even took the books from his shelves. When he said that he would retire in a year, his eyes sparkled as he outlined his plans.

"When I retire, I am going to travel. Going back and forth to New York is not traveling for me. I come from the country outside of Le Havre because I dislike the city. I must say that I like New York very much for a few days. There is always something to do there. Not so in Paris. (!!!)"

"A friend in Pittsburgh and I are going to buy a small yacht and wander off to the Fiji Islands, Bali, the South Pacific."

(We all know too well that our boys who did just that wandering in World War Two will be quite happy to let him go without them. They even feel a bit queasy at the sight of a palm!)

New French Line Ship

Continuing, Captain Garrigue said, "I was captain of the Ile de France for some years. It will no longer go to New York, but will ply between Europe and South America. A new ship, the Flandres (Flandres) will take its place.

but it will not be a one class ship. Sad news to the many who loved the old, friendly Ile de France, where everyone knew everyone, and everybody was happy for days.

In the map-room under glass in the wall are the "mother" clocks, each one controlling a clock somewhere in the ship. In a glass case embedded in cotton-batton is the "incubator," said Captain Garrigue, where time is computed to a split second from this firmly fixed clock and a Greenwich time table next to it. Clocks giving the time the world over made us feel that we were watching the wheels of the earth going round. This sense of vastness and space is possessed by both sea captains and air-pilots. They have the same keen but far-away look in their eyes while we are earth-bound.

Maps and Radar

Out on the protected bridge no wind blew although it had been rising all day. Back of the pilot's wheel in a small room were the maps, a fascinating mystery to us. The encircling blue lines meant-fair weather in certain sections, explained the captain. There were no figures giving depth soundings in the middle of the ocean, but between a thousand and five-hundred mile approach to land, the map was black with them. Those under-sea mountains!

The most awesome instrument is the radar near the pilot's wheel. From it they not only compute the distance from another ship, but they can see it!

Drink and Weather

To turn starry-eyed from scientific wonders to drink and food, and to hear a guest order a "stinger" was a jolt. The French waiter was very upset about a "sting-air." But the captain's library came to the rescue. He whipped out a little book, "How to Mix Drinks" and all was well. Especially well because the captain did not order a "stinger" but mild vermouth.

Well, indeed for us that he did. As we departed and assured him that it was the sunniest, calmest winter trip we had ever had, he replied, "I hope you can say that when it is over."

He knew that old Neptune was getting restless.
